Southeastern, a Campus Under Construction

Exterior workmen put finishing touches on the Fine Arts building.

When school began in September, students found the back of Hallie McKinney Hall littered with boards, ditches, and cement. It was all part of an expansion program to increase dormitory space and expand book exchange and cafeteria facilities. The old tennis courts that SSC netters have used to capture conference championships have been moved to a new location behind the athletic dormitory.

Annette Choate, graduate student from Durant, supplements classroom instruction in languages with frequent visits to Southeastern's new laboratory.

Learning a foreign language can be more than mastering a new communications medium. Learning another people's language can open doors to a new culture. In the stimulating sixties learning a second language can also open doors to opportunities scarcely dreamed of by yesterday's college graduates.

Aware of the significant role of foreign languages in the modern curriculum, Southeastern is fostering this area of study. The new foreign language headquarters, which include the most modern laboratory and electronic equipment available, are evidence of the stress placed by Southeastern on the importance of mastering a second language.

The college's new coordinating role in the nation's first multi-town version of the national Parlons Français program is more impressive evidence of Southeastern's regard for foreign language study.

McAlester sophomore Marilyn Holden repeats taped French vocabulary she receives on an individual headset.

New Lab Augments Language Instruction

James Gamble, Idabel senior and language major, operates the console that sends five taped languages to monitoring lab students.

Southeastern in the Sixties

Sixties Challenge Students

Like other institutions of higher learning, Southeastern State College found itself in the sixties, an age that defies definitions because of massive technical progress and unequalled world problems.

The age of the astronaut, preceded by Sputnik, awakened campuses throughout the nation and forced each institution to grow academically. At the same time, colleges found that unprecedented enrollments were commonplace, a condition which meant that schools must grow in numbers while elevating academic excellence.

Southeastern has accepted this whole challenge.

In mathematics, the "Queen of the Sciences," Southeastern has made impressive progress. Cooperating with the National Science Foundation, the college has augmented its programs with sessions for gifted high school students and with institutes for public school teachers at all levels. A new television in-service program this year is serving 53 school systems of north Texas and south Oklahoma.

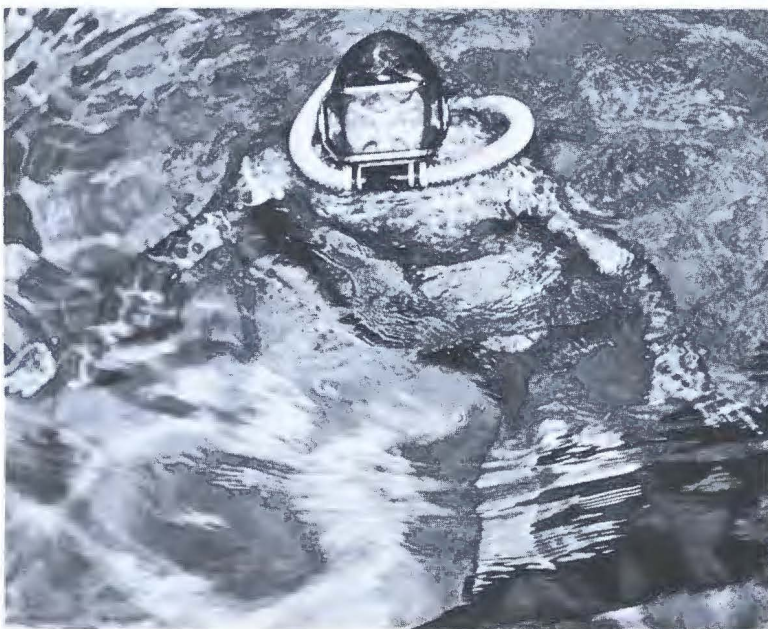

This movement has caught on in every department from natural sciences to home economics, from art to physical education. New and improved facilities have fostered academic excellence and Southeastern professors have pushed harder for excellence—and the students have responded.

Southeastern continues to build, anticipating needs of students of future decades. Today's graduates must be prepared to live in the 21st century and "Southeastern in the Sixties" looks forward toward fulfillment of the obligation while meeting head-on the academic challenge.

A new classroom and administration building takes its place on campus beside the library.

Coeds enrolled in an advanced swimming class form a star maneuver as part of a synchronized swimming routine. Aquatic-minded students formed a synchronized club on campus this year.

Charles Andrews, English instructor, uses the college pool to check out students interested in SCUBA diving.

An Aquatics-Minded School

With Lake Texoma's shores a quick 10-minute drive from the Southeastern campus, students are naturally mindful of water sports of every kind. An indoor pool on campus, used for instructional and recreational purposes, develops aquatic skills while advocating water safety under supervised instruction.

Charles McLemore (35), Southeastern cager and president of the 1963-64 student senate, shoots for two points in a favorite SSC pastime, winning basketball.

Faculty members take part in extracurricular activities, too. Dr. Earnest Sturch, Dr. John Krattiger, and Dr. Don Parham wielded heavy bats as the faculty team walked off with top honors in the intramural softball league.

Gary Jones (22), SSC halfback, finds the going rough against Austin College in the annual Texoma Bowl classic.

Sports, Organizations Head List of Extracurricular Activities

Two "friendliest" representatives cast an emblem into the annual "Friendship Fire," a traditional ceremony each fall.

Barbara Tuan-Yu Young, advertising student from Tokyo, Japan, investigates an art piece on exhibition at South-eastern.

Few subjects are more academic—and yet at the same time practical—than debate. The demanding art of logical convincing speech gets top support at SSC. Below, Quentin Thomas delivers a negative speech as John Heath and Johnnie Gilpin await their turn at the lectern.

Lewis Barker, by practical demonstration, reveals a natural law to a physical science class.

"Pep Rally"

Spirited pep rallies punctuate the fall term and football season, especially when the weather will let them be held in the college amphitheater. Lloyd Cook, SSC band director, helps a bonfire warm the spirits of the crowd prior to Southeastern's homecoming game with Southwestern, October 19.

A new building on campus provides quarters for administrative officials of Southeastern.

Art

With the completion of the new fine arts building, Southeastern's art department moved into new quarters. Lighting and equipment was specially selected to suit the needs of the department.

The annual Beaux Arts Ball, an all-campus event, and art exhibits all through the year add color to the campus scene.

The department continually strives to achieve excellence through the application and appreciation of art. Students are taught to become good art consumers so that their future lives may be fully enriched.

Biology students, under the direction of Harold Laughlin, journeyed to the wilds of northern Bryan County to search for species of crawlers. Field trips such as this one acquaint serious students with the effort that goes into research.

One of the major goals of the biology department is to give the student a functioning knowledge of the living world about him. The department not only offers courses to give general information to students but also introduces them to professional training. The department also offers a strong program for pre-medicine and dentistry along with the preparation of biology teachers.

Biology

Students in the business department work with a wide range of equipment to master the "realistic" phase of the business world. A diligent course of study keeps the business students above and below, deeply engrossed in their work.

New office space and the addition of new classrooms have given added depth to the business department.

The primary objective of the department is the training of business education teachers. Of equal concern is the training for careers in industry and the business world. Students are made aware of the automation and new machines in business as an industry.

Expert instruction in the classroom today will make specialists for the fields of business and teaching tomorrow.

Dr. Sally Leonard lectures to a Psychology 323 class during an early morning meeting in the classroom building. The class is required for students who plan to enter the teaching profession after graduation from Southeastern. Such students will complete 21 hours of education courses before a BA or BS in Education is awarded.

Southeastern's education department stresses classroom study and practice teaching. Preparing teachers for the classroom is the major concern of every SSC education instructor.

Occupying the offices formerly used by the deans and adding classroom space has added to the scope of the department.

Even though Southeastern has added courses for the business and professional leaders of tomorrow, a majority of Southeastern students will study for a future of teaching. Realization of this goal will be guided by the education department.

Education

The second summer workshop will be co-sponsored by the National Council of Teachers of English this summer. Dr. Eugene Slaughter, whose work in NCTE is known throughout the nation, has continued to work as a leader in improving the quality of English teaching.

The department was given a grant this year by the United States Department of Education for the purpose of making a survey of English students in southeastern Oklahoma. The survey is headed by Mildred Riling and specifically concerns the oral and linguistic abilities of elementary students in the area.

These projects added to the English department's primary goal of training teachers. Leading educational writers have underscored the importance of this effort and have termed this goal as a, ". . . never ending challenge for proficiency in English study."

English

New quarters in the administration building and new and modern equipment in the lab have helped foreign language classes accommodate the flow of interested students.

Numerous tape recordings in Spanish, French, German, and Russian have added to the department's ability in instructing foreign and area students.

Besides modern foreign languages, the department offers classical and historical courses in the study of foreign countries.

Home Economics

The traditional arts and crafts of homemaking plus the ability to make intelligent choices in many areas of daily living has made the Southeastern home economics department a popular area for coeds.

Home economics students put their study into practice when they plan and prepare meals for guests at teas and other social events. Their most ambitious effort in this connection comes each year with the President's dinner at district OEA meeting.

Woodworking students work in a well-lighted, roomy classroom in the industrial arts department.

The Industrial Arts department offers courses in woodworking, auto mechanics, electricity, electronics, technical drawing, and arts and crafts. Instruction in the field of electronics was again enlarged with the introduction of equipment for teaching aids. Harold Lynn, instructor of electronics, designed much of the new equipment. A course in radio theory was again in the curriculum. Upon completion of the course, the student receives a radio-telephone operator's license. Enlargement of classes, particularly the drawing classes, has brought significant enlargement to the whole department.

Mathematics

Southeastern's reputation as a center of mathematics study continues to grow each year and to attract national attention.

Dr. Leslie Dwight has given the department another star by presenting a television program daily for elementary teachers.

National Science Foundation programs are in progress throughout the year with the summer turning the department into an "institute center" for instructors throughout the country.

The new administration building made available beautiful new classrooms and offices for the tireless instructors and students of the department.

Professor Fred Collins straightens his desk while students are busy with an examination.

The Fine Arts Center gave the music department one of the finest and most modern facilities in the Southwest. Soundproof practice and rehearsal rooms provided a perfect location for the band and chorus.

Music students enrich the lives of each student on the campus by their contributions to programs on the SSC campus. One of the most significant programs held this year was the Christmas candle lighting service when the band and chorale combined efforts for an impressive and dramatic demonstration of campus music talent.

The marching band performed first at homecoming and then was asked to participate in halftime activities in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas for a professional football game between the Dallas Cowboys and the Philadelphia Eagles. This game was regionally telecast by CBS.

Concerts and tours were major activities of the concert band. The chorale's concerts and tours were equally successful. The Southeastern music department—through annual clinics and festivals—hosted hundreds of high school students during the year.

Tumbling and gymnastics are relative newcomers to the physical education course of study but its popularity with area students have made it a mainstay on the schedule.

Girls in a physical education class work out regularly on a balance beam. Linda Lindsay, standing center, supervises the new participation course.

A popular course among the "average" student as well as varsity gridders is the weightlifting class held beneath the stadium bleachers. Bob Thomas, football coach, teaches the class.

The physical education department has continued to grow and the opportunities for physical fitness for both men and women students who cannot participate in varsity sports are abundant.

Intramurals, a major activity sponsored by the department, promotes both fitness and sportsmanship. Other activities and courses provided are swimming, tumbling, weight lifting, dancing, and bowling.

The women's section of physical education was enhanced by the addition of Linda Lindsay as an instructor.

Seminars, staff members participation in professional meetings, and in-service institutes have again been part of the physics and chemistry picture.

The department's two main objectives are the training of teachers in the field and preparation for scientists and qualified lab technicians.

The social science department, with new offices and classrooms in the new administration building, has engaged in another active year on the Southeastern campus.

Its fledgling organization, the social studies club, was again prominent as the organization completed its second year on campus. The club's programs were designed to stimulate students' interest in their major field and to supplement classroom study.

The geography tour in the summer of 1963 took its traveling students through New England and into Canada. The tour plan for the summer of 1964 will travel into Mexico.

The annual social studies workshop continued to give teachers practical help in their professional status.

Southeastern debaters won an 11-4 record and two trophies at the Mid-South tournament in Arkadelphia, Arkansas. Winning debaters from Southeastern were C. W. Mangrum and Charlotte Williams, left, and Billy Hamilton and Paul Westbrook.

Southeastern drama students presented the first play on SSC's new arena stage in the fine arts building. Billye Sue Harmon, right, explains a blocking technique at an early reading session of "Antigone."

The completion of the fine arts center gave the speech and drama department a new auditorium for productions and much needed dressing rooms. Classrooms and a sound-proof broadcasting booth were also added. "A View from the Bridge" by Arthur Miller and "Antigone" by Jean Anouilh were the department's dramatic productions for the season.

Debate activities again kept Doug Duke and his students busy with campus study and research as well as with travel to tournaments in Oklahoma and neighboring states.

The 36th annual Savage Forensic again attracted debaters from throughout the country. Southeastern speech majors learned the intricacies of staging a tournament when they hosted a high school speech tournament in the fall.

THE HOUSE OF BOOKS AT SOUTHEASTERN STATE COLLEGE—The Library

The college library contains over 70,000 well-chosen books, about 165,000 government documents, and a large collection of bound and unbound magazines. New shelves and study rooms this year made room for new books and periodicals coming into the library.

For student use there is a main reading room where books for ready reference are shelved and books from the stacks are requested. Current issues and back copies of magazines and newspapers are located in the magazine room.

Aside from the excellent books and novels to be found in the library, there are many rare books which have an undetermined value.

Bloomer Wins 600th

In a career already capped with unique coaching honors, Southeastern basketball coach Bloomer Sullivan added another during the 1963-64 season. During his 27th year as director of athletics and head basketball coach, Sullivan won his 600th victory, a feat that only four other active coaches may claim.

The coach began the season with a 591-179 record, a mark which earned Sullivan a 77 percent winning margin. Victory number 600 came on the road in a clash against Langston when the Savages outgunned the Lions 84-80.

Visitors from throughout the state attended a banquet honoring the veteran coach for his accomplishment. He had already won membership in the Helms Hall-of-Fame and was named NAIA Coach-of-the-Year in 1957 when his SSC team was runner-up in the national tournament at Kansas City.

The Durant Chamber of Commerce presented Sullivan with a large engraved basketball trophy to commemorate his 600th win. They also gave the coach a colored television set.

Thomas Starts Fall Workouts

When Southeastern gridgers reported for workouts in September, head coach Bob Thomas rushed the young team through practice sessions for the Austin College opener. Four seniors, QB Charlie Johnston, FB Bobby Niles, LG Orin Harrington, and LB Danny Cole, were the most experienced collegiate players on the squad as Thomas entered his second year of rebuilding SSC's football forces. Next year, with only four team members graduating, 28 of 32 lettermen are expected to return and assist Savage grid fortunes.

Johnston Completes 72

One of the biggest question marks facing the 1963 football forecast was the passing punch of senior quarterback Charlie Johnston. In 1962, Duke Christian completed 67 passes for 883 yards and area fans deduced that Southeastern's passing threat had graduated with Christian.

Johnston quieted doubters by completing 72 passes for 1030 yards over the 10-game schedule. In addition the southpaw quarterback led the scoring column as he ran three and passed four touchdowns across the goal line to post 42 points on the scoreboard.

Two Savages Selected for All-OCC Team

Danny Cole, senior linebacker from Pernell, and Bob Wilmoth, junior left end from Idabel, landed positions on the All-Conference team voted by the coaches of the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference.

The 6-foot, 190-pound Cole called defensive signals for the Savages and was named SE player-of-the-week in the Southeastern-Northeastern clash. Although the Savages lost to the nationally-ranked Redmen, SE earned more first downs—17 to 12—and gained more total offense—300 to 200 yards.

Wilmoth was Charlie Johnston's favorite target this season by hauling in 39 passes for 623 yards. The 6-foot 3-inch, 205 pound junior caught three touchdown aerials.

Danny Cole, 61, puts the rush on Southwestern quarterback Bill Butler. Southeastern beat the Bulldogs 20-13.

Gary Jones, 22, leaps for a pass in the Austin College game.
The hardrunning sophomore halfback was SE's rushing leader for 1963 with 587 yards in 156 carries.
He also snared 21 passes for another 214 yards.

Time runs out on the Savages in their bid to hold the Katy Bell trophy, award given to the school that wins the annual Texoma Bowl classic at Denison, Texas. The Savages lost 7-0 and relinquished the bell to Austin College.

The 1963-64 basketball season was halted abruptly for the Savages in a post season game with Central State College of Edmond. Placards on the gymnasium wall shouted Southeastern's high hopes for the national tournament but Central's two consecutive play-off victories sent the Bronchos to the national meet. The Savages finished second in the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference.

The Savages finished second in the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference race in what turned out to be a close race for the runner-up spot. Central State College, after faltering at mid-season, finally turned on the steam to capture the loop crown. Southeastern, Oklahoma Baptist University, Northeastern State, and East Central State had a realistic chance for the runner-up spot with as few as four games left on the season schedule.

Southeastern won three out of its last four games—Langston, East Central, and Northwestern—to finish the conference race with a 12-6 won-lost record. The Savages lost to Panhandle at Goodwell though and were deadlocked with OBU who also rallied for a 12-6 mark.

Meeting at Durant, the Savages dumped the Baptists 88-79 to capture the runner-up position in the conference race. The resulting two-team play-off for the Kansas City tournament berth was captured by a determined Central State team who handed the Savages two defeats, 53-46 and 74-61, to move into the tournament.

Southeastern's veteran head coach, Bloomer Sullivan, achieved another unique distinction in a career already marked by noted accomplishments. Midway through the season, the Savages beat Langston University 87-79 to give Sullivan his 600th victory as a collegiate coach. Sullivan, in his 27th year as SE's cage mentor, was named NAIA Coach-of-the-Year in 1957 and was inducted into the Helms Foundation Hall-of-Fame in 1959.

Cobb Earns All-Conference Recognition

Southeastern center Wayne Cobb led the Savage offensive effort and was picked by the 10 rival OCC coaches to the All-Oklahoma Collegiate Conference team. Other picks for the OCC dream team included Willie Cotton, Central; David Bass, East Central; Major Wilson, Langston; and Norman Deckman, Panhandle.

Three other Savages were named as honorable mention candidates for the All-Conference honor. They were Elvin Sweeten, McAlester senior; Mike Martin, Durant junior; and Tommy Hedrick, Durant senior.

Enroute to his recognition, Cobb, Idabel junior, averaged 15.9 points per game against conference competition. At the free throw line, Cobb hit 158 points out of 192 attempts for a .822 percentage. The Savages led the nation's small colleges in team free throw shooting this year by hitting .813.

Southeastern's big center, 6'6" Wayne Cobb, hits a hook shot against a Southwestern defender. Cobb earned All-Conference honors in his junior year on the Savage varsity cage squad.

Elvin Sweeten, 32, sets to push another free throw through the net. The Savages hit 81.3 percent of their free-throws this season to lead the nation's small colleges in bonus shooting accuracy. Other Southeastern starters in the photo are Curtis Pittman, 15, Mike Martin, 30, Wayne Cobb, 41, and Tommy Hedrick, 55.
