The Pride Is Showing In The Faces Of The People

Southeastern's school year began with a feeling that good things would happen.

Athletic teams were picked to have record seasons.

Greeks and other organizations were predicted to gain in membership.

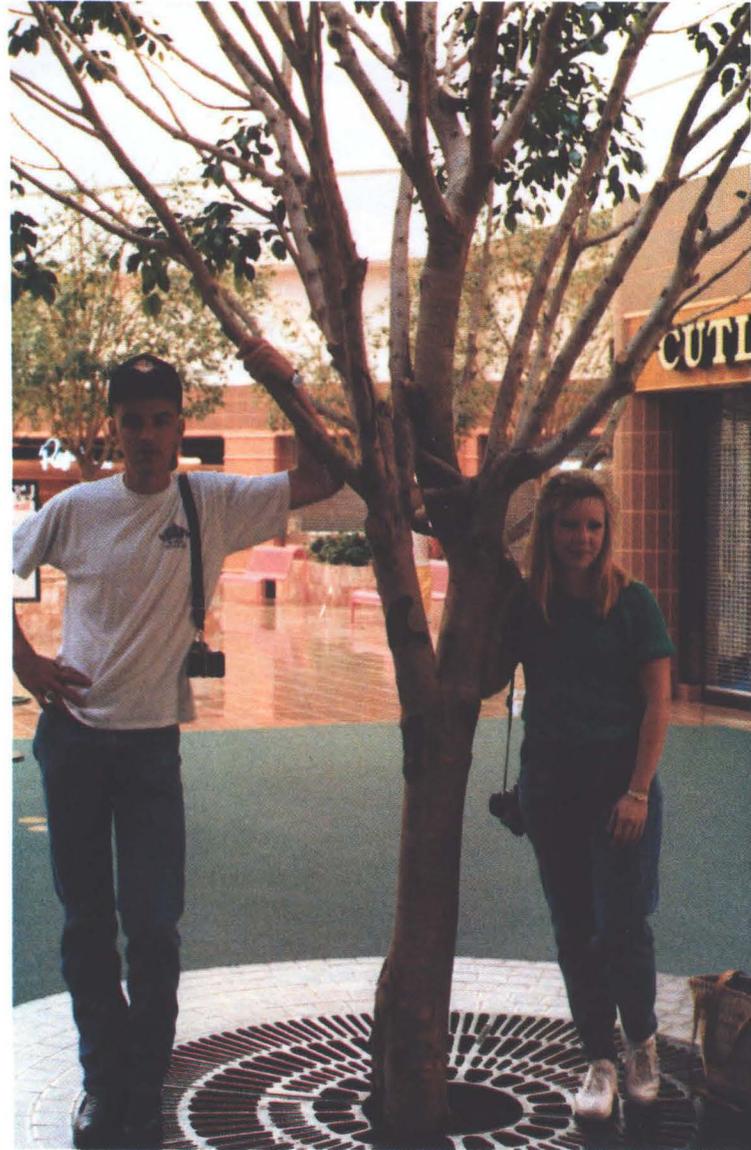

Academics were to get better with the additions of new equipment and more faculty members.

The campus underwent a badly needed facelift. Benches, lamps and sidewalks were installed with gardens and shrubs carefully planted.

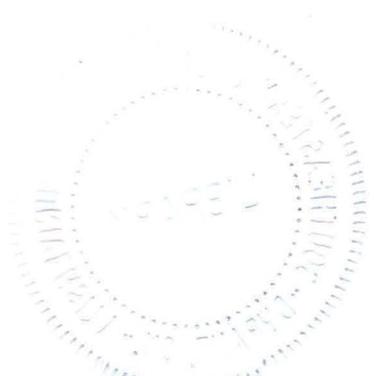

Southeastern began to show that Savage Pride.

SAVAGE DEBATERS snap pictures of presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, the Democratic governor of Massachusetts, during a campaign stop at East Texas State University in Commerce. Dukakis is speaking to several thousand young people from area colleges, universities and secondary schools from Oklahoma and Texas.

FIELD TRIPS prove to be fun, but tiring, Sam Cothran and Kim Hughes take a break during a photojournalism trip to the Midway Mall of Sherman, Texas.

Pride is the state or quality of being proud, having self-respect or a feeling of self-esteem arising from one's accomplishments.

It is also a feeling of gratification arising from association with something that is good or laudable.

In a literary sense, pride is splendor, magnificence or pomp.

While the definitions are from the Random House dictionary, all fit the description of Southeastern, as the university completed its 80th year of existence.

Southeastern had much to be proud of during the 1988-89 school term.

The Student Senate breathed new life into the faltering Springfest. The group also instituted Hokey Days for fall.

Greek organizations reorganized and revitalized the fading glory of "Being Greek." A new concept for Rush brought record numbers of pledges.

Clubs and organizations reached out to all students to put pride back into belonging to a professional or social organization.

The campus newspaper, The Southeastern, worked to make the newspaper truly the voice of the campus.

KHIB 92, the campus radio station added promotions and news to their broadcasting to take the message of Pride in Southeastern to their audience.

SAVAGE FOOTBALL Players Stewart Bond and Charlie Walker display pride in each other's accomplishments while Joe Watson adds his "good game" to the conversation.

TUBA PLAYER Gabe Gorrell stands ready to break into the school song should the football team cross the goal line, which they did many times during the game.

Pride became the style when the Savage football team had their first unbeaten season since its early years. The Savages built on that pride by continuing into the second round of the national playoffs.

The football pride kept growing as player after players was named to state and national honors. Coach Jon Lantz capped that feeling when he was named the NAIA Coach of the Year.

The Savageland Band brought a swell of excitement during every athletic event or parade as they marched the blue and gold into view of the home crowd.

Theatre at Southeastern took a giant step forward by presenting an original improvisational piece to the student body before going into regional competition.

Southeastern's Flight Team won a trip to the national competition and did well.

Debaters began pulling the pride towards themselves as they won many national tournaments.

PREPARATIONS for spring enrollment are being made by Mary Morgan with her advisor Fay Gothard Mangrum, a Communication and Theatre faculty member.

Pride showed itself in the preparations students and faculty made for their futures.

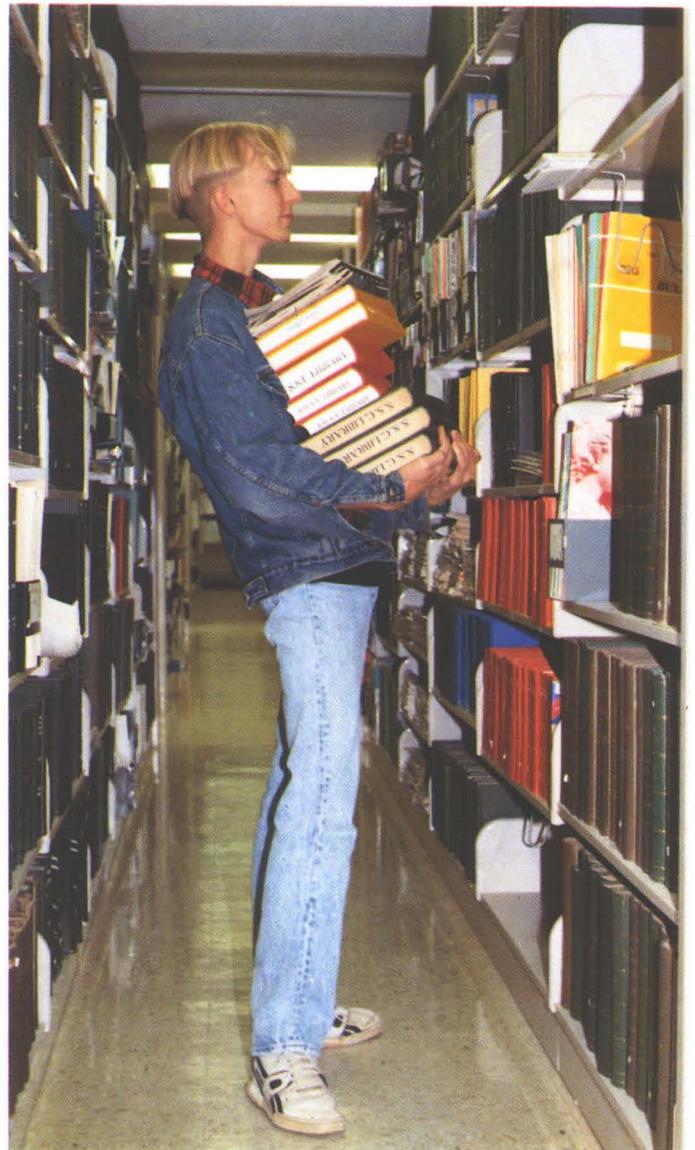

Students counseled with advisors to select courses of study which would best fit their needs. These students also kept careful records and count of their "hours" so as to make their college experience meaningful.

Faculty members upgraded their education in many ways. Some continued their study toward a doctoral degree while others stepped into the public school classrooms to observe the needs of education students.

Savage Pride Grows Daily At Southeastern

STRONG ARMS may be a result of Kenny Roberts' educational experiences at the library. Roberts spends several hours each evening picking up references.

SURVEYING the campus is Dr. Larry Williams and Sharon Berish. Rudy Manley and his daughter Taryn also wait to see what will come during the "rained out" homecoming parade.

Savage, as defined in the dictionary, is one who is fierce, wild, rugged and proud.

Those definitions definitely fit the people of the Southeastern campus.

Faculty, staff and administrators are fierce in presenting the best environment for learning. These people are also fierce in protecting the students rights to a quality education.

Students are equally fierce in their pursuit of higher education. As competitors, their fierce pride shows as they strive to be the best.

Many of the people at this Durant school are hardy pioneer families who braved the rugged adventure of carving a civilized state from a savage land.

As fans, the Savages are wild about their teams, be it the debating team or the basketball team. When victory is won, the stands go wild. If defeat reigns, the fans are wild in their praise for "doing the best possible."

Savages are proud. A swell of trumpet peals during the school song, the sight of the Savage mascot and more brings a throat-catching tear of pride.

CANDY AND other goodies from the snack rack at the college grocery supplement the cafeteria diet for Joe Trotta. Most of the college students and faculty head to the store for a late night snack or sandwich.

SAVAGE MASCOT Scott Gaines whips the crowd into a frenzy by climbing the fences and waving the Southeastern banner around the field.

The Savage Pride Is Special

Southeastern's choice of the noble Indian chief as a mascot was significant. Durant was located in the Indian Territory. The land the school occupies was once owned by an Indian family.

Many of the students were of Indian descent, which they display great pride.

Although the chief was called a Savage, the term was used to mean a rugged individual with a fierce pride and undying loyalty, qualities that prized above all.

At Southeastern, the pride showed everytime two Savages met. It showed everytime alumni gathered. It showed every day.

College days were special. It was a time to explore life and new ideas. It was a time to take classes that led to career decisions.

A favorite story among the faculty was the one about a freshman who came eager to be a nuclear physicist. The student took the hours required in the degree program as well as the general education classes in art, history, English and math.

After the semester ended, the student chose to major in English education and became a top student in that field.

College days were a time to look at new ideas. Many people tend to do things a particular way “just because that it is the way it is done.” Southeastern’s fine faculty taught that there was always a new and usually better way if “you just work hard enough.”

This time was also the time when students learned to make independent decisions based upon their own knowledge and experience.

This was a time when many students got their first job without their parents' assistance. It was the first time for many that they decided where to buy insurance, get their hair cut, purchase groceries or finance loans.

This was also a time when most students moved away from home. Responsibilities of housekeeping and budgeting added to the pressure of being a Southeastern student.

But many faculty and staff members were there to help make the transition easier.

The Pride Shines For Savage Students

School pride was special. It brought together people with different ideas and different heritages.

School pride drew graduates from the early 1900s to last spring grads back for a homecoming celebration.

School pride showed in the fine work on a term paper to the excellent spirit displayed at athletic events.

School pride showed in the faces of people with a common goal: a good education.

School pride was Southeastern. The blue and gold tradition lived on in the hearts of the faculty, staff, administration as well as the students.

That pride was translated into school loyalty. Everywhere on campus, our pride was showing!

MOST STUDENTS have occasion to visit the Administration Building during the school year, usually to pre-enroll for the next semester or to use the business office to cash checks or take classes in the social science area.

Homecoming Draws Alumni Back

Homecoming was special for the men and women of Southeastern.

For clubs, organizations and Greeks, it was a time to welcome back alumni, display their artistic abilities with floats and to impress each other with their school spirit.

For faculty and staff, it was a time to renew acquaintances with former students and colleagues.

For the football team, it was the time to demolish the Northwestern Rangers.

Homecoming saw the traditional events of the alumni dinner, induction of outstanding alumni, presentation of campus royalty and outstanding football.

HOMECOMING Queen Hadley Kirkpatrick is congratulated by university president Larry Williams moments after being named to the title. She is the Wesley Foundation representative.

FIRST Place Queen contestant Robin Fuller and Andre Burrell of the Black Student Union move into position for the Queen's coronation.

LOADING THE STANDS takes a while for the Savageland Band. Musician Jayna Hearn allows a fellow band member to move into position.

SAVAGE royalty was never prettier. 1988 Homecoming Court members include Robin Fuller, first, Black Student Union; Hadley Kirkpatrick, queen, Wesley Foundation, and Brenda Allen, second, American Chemical Society.

CHEERLEADERS brave the rain to help the Savages knock off their homecoming opponents while the crowd goes wild.

Rain Doesn't Dampen High Spirits or Fun

Rain didn't dampen the high spirits or the fun of homecoming.

Although the parade was postponed until Monday, campus participants had a ball getting every detail just right.

RODEO CLUB members ride high as they cheer the Savages to victory with a special float.

FIRST PLACE honors go to the Black Student Union with their riverboat float in honor of the Mardi Gras theme.

COME ALONG, baby puppy, is probably what Lambda Chi Delta Little Sister Greta Thomas is saying to her puppy during the homecoming parade.

KAPPA DELTA PI's education entry emphasizes the fun of education as well as the serious nature.

FINISH LINE ecstasy is special to members of the Special Olympics teams. The young people came from area schools to put their school pride on the line.

KXII's Kristen May talks to huggers and officials while gathering a story for evening news.

IT'S ALL in the timing. Competitors, coaches and timekeepers compare results in order to determine a winner.

HAPPINESS is being a winner and finding special people who cheer you on.

THE WINNERS STAND is more than being the fastest or the best. In Special Olympics, it stands for doing your personal best.

Special Olympics Is Part of Savage Pride

AGONY of defeat and sometimes the feet and most times the feat put even the hardest competitor in the doldrums after Springfest at Southeastern.

PHOTOGRAPHER Rodney Pruitt pauses between action with the Theatre at Southeastern team.

Springfest Taps Abilities and Talents of Savages

Student senators breathed new life into the traditional Springfest Activities.

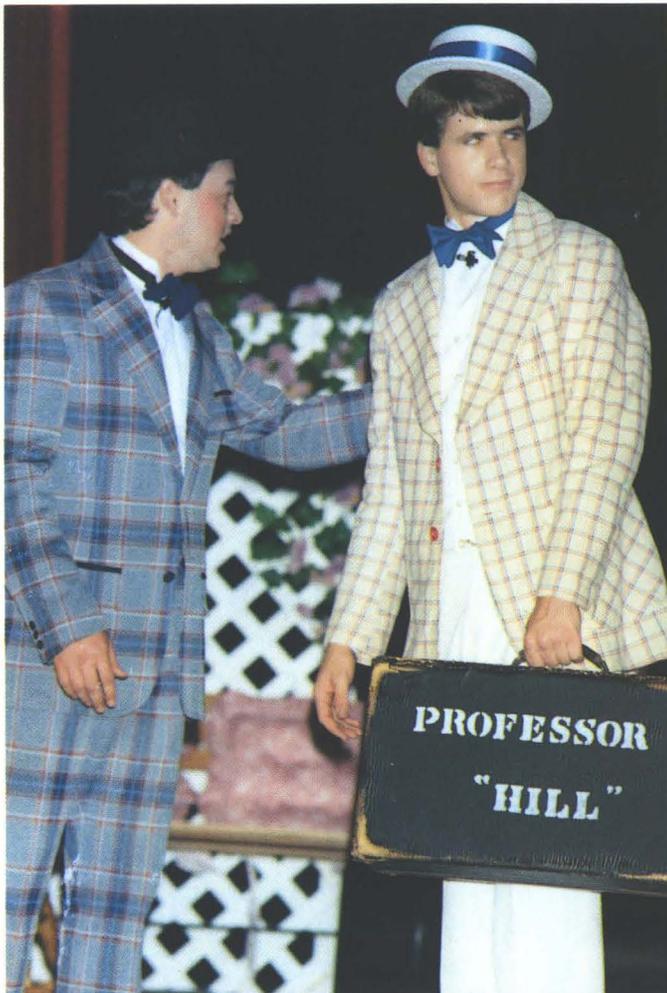

The campus representatives created new games, revamped the old ones and invented rules to make a grown Savage shiver.

Students and faculty turned out in record numbers to play Pictionary, run relays, ride tricycles and lip synch their favorite songs.

TEAM COMPETITION is rough, but the relay race was as much fun as ruggedness.

AN INTERESTING DUET between James Hearn and Kendall Robertson keep the show moving at a rapid clip.

STAR Carol Lee Hanny sings a love ballad to her man.

Chorvettes Sing "The Music Man" Show

Southeastern's singing ambassadors, The Chorvettes, took center stage during Homecoming activities to perform "The Music Man."

The show played three nights to standing-room-only crowds.

THE BEST Boys' Band is George Berish, Josh Estep, Jason Hammel, Bryan Hughes, Jared McEntire, James Mitchell and Joshua Wright.

THE BARBER SHOP Quartet of Gary Scott, Darren Wallace, Andy Danderson and Wes Singleton wows the crowd during several spots in the program.

“The Music Man” marked the return of Mary Ann Craig as director of The Chorvettes.

The show actually began producing during the summer when the idea of a children’s band appealed to faculty members.

That led to remembering the boys’ band from “The Music Man.”

Craig and her musical troupe, along with many volunteers, worked several months to stage the show.

SWEET (?) CONTENT shows on the faces of Sharon Taylor and Alan Davenport.

BRINGING A SMALL TOWN to life are Sharon Taylor, Liz Cobb, Alan Davenport and Matthew Eggleton.

DISPLAYING vocal talents are Gary Scott, Andy Danderson, Wes Singleton, Darren Wallace, Alan Davenport, Scotty Mayabb and Amanda Cobb.

Costumes and fittings took time as did the building of sets.

Volunteers from the campus and the community put in many hours to bring a special touch to the Homecoming weekend.

THREE women give a lift to the show's light side. Singing are Lannette Long, Sharon Taylor and Liz Cobb.

ADDING flavor are Lanette Long, Keith Wasserman and Mathew Eggleton

SHOWING spunk, and a little leg, is soprano Liz Cobb.

MILKING THE CROWD is Paula Steiffer, while Carol Lee Hanny watches.

THE WOMEN'S QUARTET of Jayna Hearn, Sharon Taylor, Robin Self and Kristi Carr adds spice and spitfire to "The Music Man."

SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY is brought to life by actors with the Oklahoma Shakespearean Festival each summer.

The Oklahoma Shakespearean Festival completed its ninth year during the summer by performing one of its richest seasons.

In addition to offering by the Bard, the festival showcased "The Nerd," "Bambi" and "Tintypes." A teen training show featured clips of upcoming talent.

THE NERD Gary Varner feels odd after "friends" remove their shoes and put paper bags on their heads.

Shakespearean Plays And Modern Shows Are Summer Fare

Career Day Places Seniors

EMPLOYMENT SERVICES and businesses used computer match applicants with positions during Career Day.

Southeastern's Placement Office hosted a career day in the ballroom during the spring and fall semesters to help seniors get placed into good careers.

Businesses and schools from across the country had booths set up to interview prospective employees. Many students found a job that would be waiting for them following graduation.

PLACEMENT DIRECTOR Wanda Watson and assistant Kathy Fuss prepare applications and register participants.

CAREERS IN CORRECTIONS, a booth by the U.S. Department of Justice - Federal Bureau of Prisons, is manned by personnel director J.D. Powell.

CHECKING out the computer products used to match students with positions proved to be almost as productive as the job fair.

Theatre at Southeastern Is Outstanding

Bringing life to the written word seemed like a cliché, but Theatre at Southeastern staged shows that gave meaning to otherwise flat words.

An outstanding accomplishment was the conception of “The Beginning, The Middle, The End,” an improvisation piece.

A PLASTER face casting is meticulously checked by Jamie Rumph.

IMPROVISATION by Glen Veteto, shows the wide range of talents encouraged by Theatre at Southeastern.

THE SHOW "The Death and Life of Joe Egg" showcases the talents of Molly Wyatt, John Risso and Amy Heath.

PUBLICITY becomes ever-more important with the fast-growing reputation of the Theatre program. Jamie Rumph and Max Baker work on a release and program for an upcoming performance.

TEAM LEADER Rudy Manley directs participants to the various games while Jon Johnston prepares to jump into the tug of war contest.

Hokey Days turned out to be a faculty-versus-students version of Springfest. Held for the first time during the fall, the two days featured games such as tug-of-war, Pictionary, croquet, and frisbee toss.

The competition was designed to bring students together with their teachers and school administrators.

MIGHTY strength, grunts and groans accompany the tug-of-war for their money. as the faculty team headed by Rudy Manley gives students a run

GIVING the frisbee a strong toss is Sharon Berish. Kevin Wright is either encouraging or harassing the dean on her throw.

PUSHING the ball over the net takes talent and cheerleading participants Fran Mickle and Peggy Mattingly preparing to leap into action as their teammate goes for the score.

Hokey Days Adds Fun To Fall Term

Hokey days was a success for those who participated and for those who observed.

CAPTAINING the student team is Mark Glenn, who said that win, lose or draw "a good time was had by all."

INTENSE study by faculty teammate Gary Williams helps him figure out next shot.

Brings Hokey Days Friendly Competition

A special relationship developed between the faculty and students who played in the Hokey Days competition. A closeness evolved that formed the basis for friendship.

A FEMALE TOUCH, or actually using the English, gave Ingrid Westmoreland the edge over teammate Gary Williams during the croquet competition.

HOISTING THE Trophy is Andrea Leatherwood, with assistance from Southeastern's president Larry Williams. The student teams won, but faculty members vowed to even the score next fall.

Hokey Days ended with the students outgunning the faculty by a narrow margin. But more than a trophy was awarded. Respect and understanding took place.

Living History Is Brought to Campus

by Cheryl Peters
Public Relations

In October of 1988 Southeastern Oklahoma State University initiated a series of "Living History" lectures to increase campus and community awareness of local, state and national history. Over the next three years, in observance of the upcoming 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution, Southeastern's series will continue to bring insight and experience to the students of Southeastern and the citizens of Oklahoma.

In 1988, Southeastern was named one of four bicentennial campuses in Oklahoma by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, based in Washington, D.C. Dr. Larry Williams, president of Southeastern, formed a committee to coordinate Living History events, with Dr. Ingrid Westmoreland of the Social Sciences faculty serving as chairperson.

The celebration opened with a dinner to recognize the accomplishments of former Governor Raymond Gary, who now resides on his ranch near Madill, Oklahoma. Also celebrated was the official release of a biography of Governor Gary, "Man on the Second Floor," written by Dr. L. David Norris, SOSU Vice-President for Student Affairs, and Dr. James Milligan, Chairman of the Social Science Department, and published by the Oklahoma City-based Oklahoma Heritage Association as part of the Oklahoma Trackmaker Series.

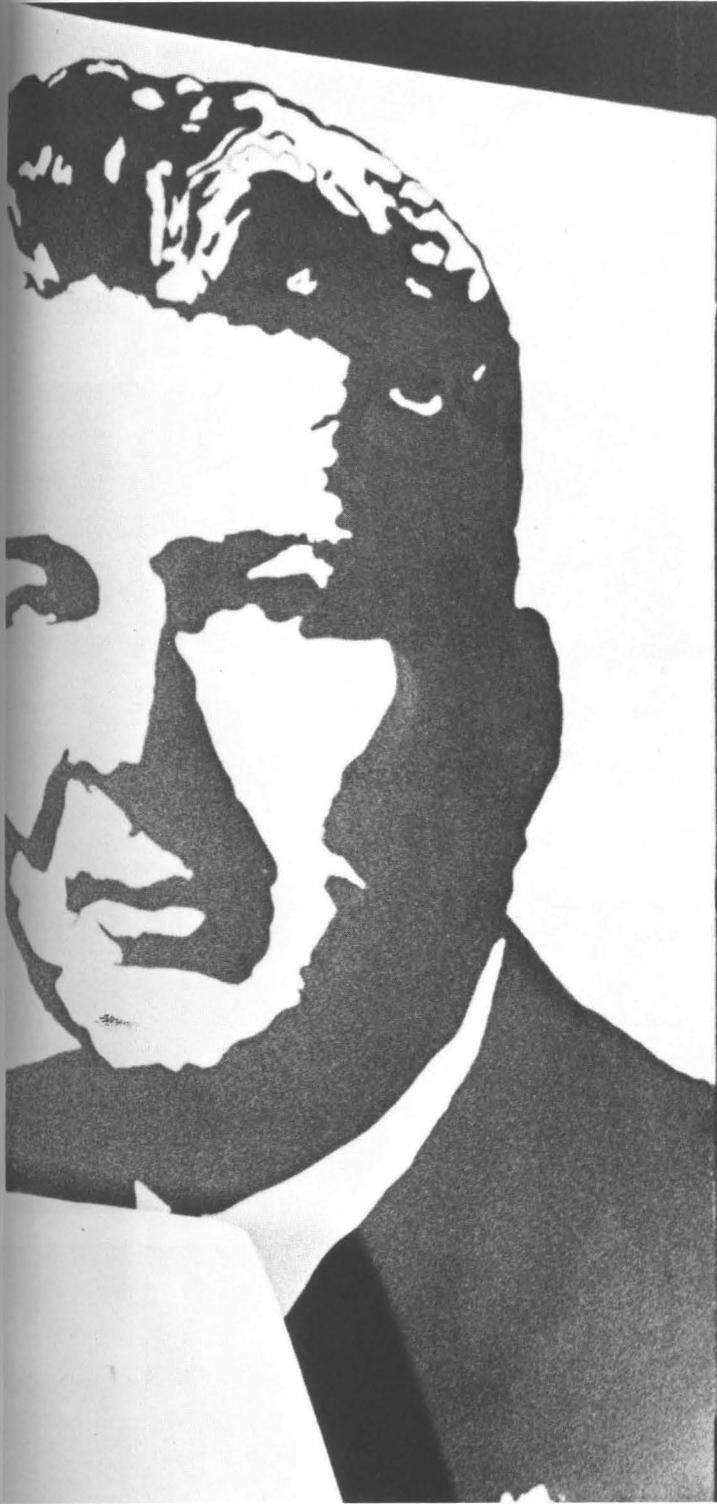

Former Governor George Nigh, former Chancellor E.T. Dunlap, former speaker Carl Albert, U.S. Senator Don Nickles, U.S. Congressman Wes Watkins, state Senator Billy Mickle, and state Representative Guy Davis were the first in a group of distinguished leaders to visit Southeastern's campus.

"This year's event was the first in a group of appearances by distinguished state political leaders who are prominent in the history of Oklahoma," said President Williams.

"It's a great opportunity for Southeastern to participate in the living history of our state. This unique series has a great deal to offer in the way of bringing tradition and experience to campus. It will enhance our appreciation of history, not only at the state and local level, but also of our national Constitution and Bill of Rights."

Circle K Blood Drive Is Successful

ANSWERING the call to donate blood is Scott Gaines. The process takes around an hour.

Circle K International held its annual Red Cross Blood Drive in the Student Union Ballroom during both the fall and spring semesters.

The group broke a record in donations each semester.

Blood donated was used to help north Texas and southern Oklahoma.

ANTICIPATION, the prick and the end show in each expression on Kathy Fuss's face

FRESHMEN line up to register for the orientation sessions, held all over the Southeastern campus.

Freshman Orientation Assists New Students In Adapting to Campus

Freshman Orientation, sponsored by the High School and College Relations Office, was design to assist new students in getting the feel of Southeastern's campus.

International Bazaar Shows Culture

THAILAND's exhibit featured beautiful clothing and textiles along with photos and magazines.

Southeastern is host to students from around the world. Each has a special culture or heritage. These blend to make the school a mixing pot with a worldly flavor.

Each semester, the International Student Association hosts the International Bazaar in the ballroom. Articles and items from the countries represented at Southeastern are on display.

ARTICLES from Taiwan's newspapers highlight the display.

BEAUTIFUL handmade articles from the Middle and Far East capture the eyes of visitors to the International Bazaar.

DURANT NATIVE Stephanie Norris takes on an exotic look as she models an Indian ceremonial sari during the International Bazaar.

TALKING IT OVER are Greg Neece, Clark Ritchey and Coach Jon Lantz. The Savages had their best season in many years.

Savages End Football Season With Outstanding 11-1 Record And A National Ranking

At the mid-season mark, the Savages faced down Northeastern. The Savages went on to ice the Southwestern Bulldogs before putting the Northwestern Rangers on the run during homecoming.

Although the Savages had a perfect record, rabid fans waited with bated breath as the Savages traveled to East Central for "the game." Each play was perfect and the Savages emerged victorious.

With only Langston between the Savages and a perfect season, the campus had a feeling of excitement and anticipation. The Savages pulled off the win and were invited into the national play offs.

The first game was against Central Arkansas. The Savages won 21-14 on the home field.

The Savages had their only defeat at the hands of Adams State, 38-7.

Pride In

Being A Savage

Accomplishments Show Pride In Being A Savage

Savage accomplishments made pride a big part of Southeastern's vocabulary during the 1988-89 school year.

Sure, the football team had the best season on record. But individuals had some great high points in the school's history.

Chryl Schied of Bennington won the Miss Teen of Oklahoma pageant and represented the campus and the state in the Hawaii-based national competition.

Carol Lee Hanny won the lead in The Music Man, the show as part of the Homecoming festivities.

Artist Amy Garrett completed several paintings that faculty and students admired.

Faculty members gained more respect as they, too, had many major accomplishments.

MISS TEEN OF OKLAHOMA Chryl Schied shows the style that took her to national competition Hawaii.
