

Savage

United
For Tomorrow

The staff of Savage '91 would like to acknowledge Southeastern's photographer, Dan Hoke, and to express our thanks for all his hard work.

Dan is a 1987 graduate of Central State University, with a BA in Photo Journalism. He has been employed at Southeastern in the Public Relations Department since March 1988. In his "spare time," Dan enjoys jet skiing, backpacking, and reading.

Thank you, Dan Hoke, for volunteering all of your time and hard work to help make this yearbook possible.

Southeastern
Oklahoma
State University

Students
Of Social Unity

Southeastern Oklahoma State University of Durant is a prime example of social unity. As one walks through campus the variety of races represented is obvious. It's not uncommon to see different nationalities socializing in all events. For that reason S.O.S.U. could easily have another meaning, Students Of Social Unity, which briefly portrays the united spirit shared by all. That same social unity is shared in all departments.

Many Ethnic Clubs have been organized to further involve our foreign brothers and sisters in campus life; meanwhile, giving them the opportunity to retain their identity and culture while sharing ours. By combining all these factors our cultures can benefit from each other while building a solid education.

Academics

Students discover that Campus Life involves a lot of studying like it or not. The Library is an appropriate place for those who need silence. Other students who did not have to have peace and quiet, found the Coffee Shop to suit their needs. Study and Smack groups were both found there.

Activities

Life on campus can't be all work and no play. There comes a time when it comes necessary to study fun for a change.

SOSU features many activities throughout the year. The year continues with Springfest VII, Special Olympics, Parents' Day, and many other events.

Dr. Williams addresses crowd for the dedication of the new Water Fountain while Amanda Cobb, Brett Drum, Millie Allen, Camille Phelps, Odes Massey, Andrea Crowl, and Lizz Cobb, await ribbon cutting ceremony on Parents' Day.

Take a good look at these Springfest participants, they won't look the same later.

The Wesley Center (Wesley Foundation) is a Christian Student Center, sponsored by local Methodist, Catholic, Episcopalian, Lutheran, Disciples of Christ, and Presbyterian Churches in the Durant, Bryan County, and surrounding county area.

We are evangelical in outreach, ecumenical in presentation, with the purpose of assisting the students of Southeastern Oklahoma State University grow in their Spiritual, Personal, and Scholastic Life. We sponsor annual events like informational forums, and monthly programs which include church visitations and luncheons for faculty and students.

In-House, we share discussion nights, Bible studies, relaxation sessions, and programs which promote spiritual growth. We are active on campus in student government, sports activities, and special programs.

The Wesley Center is grateful for the support received from the campus, and hopes to be a part of the growth of Southeastern for quite some time to come. Activities of 1990/91 - Parent's Day booth and Open House; Homecoming float and Queen (Stephanie Brewer); Fundraising activity; attendance at home basketball games; discussion programs; luncheons; visitations; Christmas program, co-sponsored with President's Club; Christmas Card to the campus project; Harvest Party; Bible studies; leadership programs; movie nights; Chi Alpha meetings.

E.T. Dunlap Medal And

and Southeastern's President,
Dr. Larry Williams present the first
E.T. Dunlap Medal to
U.S. Senator David L. Boren*

. . . I can tell you I have been in front of student bodies across this country over the last three or four years, whether it's Harvard, Stanford, MIT or other institutions all across this country . . . and you should know, that I was never asked better, more penetrating, more informed questions that indicated more intellectual curiosity and more capacity for growth than I was asked by these students here at Southeastern Oklahoma State University.

. . . Southeastern Oklahoma State University is an institution that you should be proud of, Dr. Williams. You and your faculty are to be congratulated for what you are doing with your student body. I hope the people of Durant realize what a real crown jewel that they have right here in this institution. These are some of the finest students in the United States of America.

Lecture Series

Senator David L. Boren, first recipient of the E.T. Dunlap Medal, delivers keynote address during the banquet held in his honor, on Southeastern's campus, October 30, 1990.

. . . The E.T. Dunlap Medal and Lectureship Series will identify the ablest minds in the nation and bring them to Southeastern Oklahoma State University to share their views on higher education and public policy. Studies and lectures in this area are quite fitting for today's modern society, which is highly influenced by rapidly changing knowledge weighted with advancing technology. Sincere attention by public policy makers must be given today to those issues relating to the advancement of higher education, which is so vital to the welfare of our state's economy and the economic well-being of our people.

-Chancellor Emeritus Dr. E.T. Dunlap

Chancellor of the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education, Dr. Hans Brisch and Oklahoma State Superintendent of Schools, Sandy Garrett speak to area educators.

Dr. E.T. Dunlap, Chancellor Emeritus Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education 1961-1982

Dedication

The theme of 'Savage 91' is "United For Tomorrow", so we dedicate this yearbook to all S.O.S.U. students. Although we began as individuals from diverse backgrounds, we are now united in the quest for knowledge as one.

Let us continue this unity as we enter the working world, that we may work together "United For Tomorrow."

Students are seen working together to improve the campus.

Dawn Bradley, Felton Coston, and Sindy Coston stop to discuss a course they share.

The library is a common place to find all students.

These students found time to gather for a Special Olympic Promotion.

Students

Southeastern's students are united in their effort to improve not only themselves, but also their world. Today they study together much as they will work together in the future.

The Apple Computer Lab in Morrison Building is a popular place.

Theatre at Southeastern plays an important role in campus life. The Theatre Department presents many good plays during the year.

Retreat at Texoma Targets Student Leadership Skills

by Colleen McGraw
Editor "The Southeastern"

Student leaders on campus got a taste of leadership decision-making in last week's Leadership Retreat held at the Texoma Lodge.

The weekend retreat featured speakers Dr. Greg Sawyer of North Texas State University and Steve Jordan, an Ardmore native in the insurance business.

Several faculty club advisers were also present.

The first evening, Sawyer offered techniques to help students (and those faculty and administrators present) determine their leadership and personality type.

Students at the end of the first session volunteered problems encountered with their campus organizations for a case study to be developed by Dean Sharon Berish and advertising/public relations instructor Dr. Bob Hays.

Berish and graduate student assistant Liz Cobb presented Sawyer with a SOSU T-shirt and lapel pin.

The evening ended with a volleyball game and a dance with music provided by SOSU student radio station KHIB.

The next morning, Jordan hosted a talk on what he titled the "four dimensions of behavior" and supplemented Sawyer's exercises with his own methods of determining leadership style.

After breaking for lunch, students and faculty divided into groups to analyze and role-play a case study.

The exercise was headed by Hays and Berish, and was based on the leadership problems submitted the night before by student organization leaders.

The retreat ended with a question and answer session between Williams and the students present.

BROTHERS HAVE SOUTHEASTERN CAMPUS DOING TRIPLE TAKES

by Colleen McGraw
 editor "The Southeastern"

If you ever walk across campus and run into some guy over and over and think, "That guy sure gets around a lot!," be prepared. It just may be the Horner triplets.

During an interview they granted recently with The Southeastern in the news office, students would wander in and do triple takes at the sight of the brothers.

Other students who wandered in, already familiar with the triplets, would attempt to guess and identify them.

The brothers never seemed to tire of playing good-natured "mind games" with their friends. What became apparent was a strong sense of mischief, and a never-ending love for the attention given and the confusion caused by their unusual fraternal set-up.

An easy affection seems obvious between them; they're all given to ribbing one another. Clint, for example, described how simple it was to tell them apart: "Dave's the smart one, I'm the good-looking one, and Scott's just the 'other one'," he deadpanned.

Their first names are actually Clinton, Trenton, and Brenton, but the triplets opted to go by middle names to eliminate confusion.

Laughingly, they evaded questions about "switching" in classes. "That would be telling!"

As for switching on dates, they answered true to form, "You never know..."

Their triplet status gets them into some strange scrapes here on the SOSU campus. "Constantly, people come up and say 'How are you?', 'What'd you do class?' and we have no idea who they are," explained Clint. "We just play along, and say we don't remember or whatever then tell 'em gotta go!"

"We made one person mad," laughed Scott. "They came into class the next day, and they said, 'I kept calling you, and you never would turn around and talk to me!'" One lady said one day she saw one of us at the Bookstore, one of us at Administration, and one in the Fine Arts Building. She said she thought, 'Golly, this person walks and changes clothes so quick!'"

He continued, "Dr. Wester was our math teacher here, and me and Clint were sitting in class and he was asking names and majors and he came to me and Clint, and said 'Oh, we have twins, everybody! Ya'll are identical twins, aren't you?' and we said, 'No, really we're not.' And he said 'How is that?' And we said 'We're triplets!' He thought we were being sarcastic, until about three weeks later Dave came to meet us there at class. Dr. Wester was out in the hall talking to Dave—thought he was one of us, and me and Clint came around the corner. Dr. Wester's jaw hit the floor! He had to get the entire staff to come look at us."

The Horners have a colorful family history.

The triplets have three older sisters (not triplets). However, of course they had to spend some time on the leg-pulling claiming that their sisters were the "famed" Easter triplets from Bennington.

There is some history of multiple births on both sides of the family.

Family memories include one major scare for Dave.

"We were going to get our driver's licenses, and we had our birth certificates out," remembered Dave. "We were looking at them, since we'd never seen them before, and each has a thumbprint and a footprint. I said, 'Mom, my thumbprint doesn't match my thumb!'"

"And she told us about how when we were little, she kept us in order from birth - Clinton was first, Scott was the middle and I was the last. Since Clinton was a little bit smaller, she needed a way to distinguish between me and Scott.

For those girls who want to find a way to the triplets' hearts, the triplets say their ideal girl has "... sort of blondish-brown Brunette-red hair; kind of tall/short; and kind of skinny, but a little bit wide; kind of greenish-blue eyes with a little bit of brown..."

Clint specified, "We want to date girls with cars!" (The triplets must share their pickup presently).

The triplets said they used to wear cowboy style clothes, but recently they updated to what they felt was a more "college" type of style. They said in high school they always wore boots, due to the fact that they were raised ranching.

As for dressing alike, they said they've now pared it down to only two sets of identical shirts, but still get teased by people who think they never do their laundry if one triplet happens to wear one of the shirts the day after another wears one.

According to Dave, one girl saw him in the same shirt pattern at a dance Friday night and when he wore another of the same pattern Monday at the bookstore, she teased, "Yeah, sure!" when he tried to explain.

One handy thing, according to the triplets, is that none of them has one wardrobe? all have three.

Clint addressed a burning question that everyone seems to ask them. "Everybody asks us, 'What is it like to be triplet?' But we want to know what does it feel like not to be a triplet? So don't ask us that, because we don't know the answer! We don't have anything to compare it to. I guess if one of us was to go off and get married or live on our own, we would know how to answer that, but we've always lived together up to now."

The brothers presently live together in an upstairs apartment (described of course as a "penthouse" by Clint).

Continuing the definition of life as a triplet, "I guess it's like having a brother that can't beat up on you, and you can't beat up on him," described Clint, referring to their similarity in size.

According to the twins, they have never really been able to fight with one another.

"We can't do that," said Scott. "It'll be like, 'Clint, I hate you!' Then, 'Can you buy me something to eat?'"

"No, there's never been any real trouble," agreed Clint. "We just get mad and say how we feel, and that's it."

"Me and Scott may have occasionally scuffled," he explained. "But we've always stepped back and gone, 'Whoa!' because we never want it to go any further. We never hit Dave, because he won't hit back and it's no fun!"

Scott explained further what it's like to be a triplet: "It's like having someone that, when they put your clothes on, you can decide, 'Man, that looks good on me!'"

He followed this amusing aspect of "tripletness" with an anecdote: "I was driving the pickup, and one of us has to sit in the middle, you know? The mirror was propped half crooked. I looked into it, and thought, 'Man, my hair's messed up!' And I tried to straighten it, and I couldn't see my hand in the mirror!"

The Horners said they're always willing to talk, and never tire of meeting new people who want to ask about life as a triplet.

"Most people tell us they're afraid to come up and bother us, and say, 'I know you probably hate this, but . . .' It never bothers us, though," said Scott. "I guess we grew up having all this attention, and we always liked it." "Attention, girls," stressed Clint into the interview microphone.

"So come up and introduce yourselves," urged Scott, "we don't mind!"

"She had a bracelet on Scott, and it broke one day, so she put fingernail polish in his palm and laid us down. We had company coming in all the time, and they went in and picked us up and shuffled us around, carried us and put us back down. She went back and picked us up and looked at Scott, and the fingernail polish was gone! The sweat had rubbed it off, and she didn't know if they had laid us back down in order. It scared her."

"So here we were looking at the birth certificates, and she was telling us this story, and I was thinking, 'I'm not who I thought I was!'"

"She said, 'You must not be Dave . . .' I was scared to death, until she laughed and admitted, 'Oh, that's my certificate anyway!' About had a heart attack."

One often hears stories of a strange "affinity" between twins or triplets, such as the ability of one to feel pain when another is hurt. According to the Horners, this isn't noticeably the case.

"There're a lot of times when we'll say the exact same thing at the same time," said Clint, "but we don't know what each other are thinking."

"We don't do anything like 'feel each other's pain' either," added Dave.

Clint mentioned, "We went to a triplets convention in Oklahoma City one time and talked to some other triplets. Some of them do feel that way. Some for example, if their sister's been in an accident, will think, 'My sister's been hurt!' or something. But then again, we've never been through anything serious like that together, so we don't know anyway. But as for feeling each other's pain, we've not really been aware of it."

Clint and Scott labeled Dave as the shy one of the three.

Scott joked that Dave's driving is terrible. "Well, he's not so bad now, but when he first was learning, boy, look out! He was passing on a hill one time, and almost got run over by a truck."

Scott and Dave claim that if one of them, is teased by the others most often, it's Dave. Perhaps the order of birth explains this, with Clint born first, then Scott, then Dave.

The Horner brothers had plenty of stories about going through school in triplicate.

"We dressed alike until about junior high," said Dave. "We just never thought about it before then. It was maybe the first day of junior high when our English teacher said 'Why don't you start dressing like individuals?' and we said, 'Now's there's an idea!' But then that same teacher would call us by saying, 'Hey, triplets, come here.' Individuals, huh?"

One surprise in the triplets' past was their history in high school theatre. According to Clint's account, it consisted of the "three kings of orient" - every year.

Another anecdote: "In high school," said Scott, "when we'd play other schools, me and Clint would get on the court, and the other team would sit there and argue, 'I'm guarding him!,' 'No, I'm guarding him!' One time, Clint fouled out and I got thrown out of the game!"

"That was fine with me," responded Clint, grinning. "I just kept on playing!"

All three of the triplets work part-time. Scott works at the SOSU concession stand at games and at Price's Printing here in town. Dave can be seen here at the Campus Bookstore in the afternoons this semester. Clint also works on campus, at the motor pool division of Campus Security, as well as at Durant's Super H.

Each has a different major; Scott is majoring in business administration; Dave's major is biology/chemistry (with pre-med intentions). Clint, when asked, said he is majoring in "Girls 101 and 102!" Really, his major is business, banking and finance emphasis.

"Should we tell people what we drive, so they can wave at us?" asked Clint (a red Supercab Ford pickup, incidentally). "Address? Phone number?" he added, grinning.

Glen Halik 1990

Age 94, Violinist and Auditing Student Loves to Learn

by Colleen McGraw
editor "The Southeastern"

Hat in hand, Southeastern student Glen Halik can often be seen resolutely crossing the campus on his way to class.

Mr. Halik is one of many over traditional age SOSU students, with one difference: Halik has been a lifelong student for 94 years.

Halik, whose passion is music, joined the student body last semester and this semester is auditing Dr. Robert McFadden's History of Music class, and Dr. James Wintle's sophomore level Music Theory and Literature.

At the age of five, Glen Halik first picked up the violin and began to play.

At age six, his father discovered he had the gift of absolute pitch (the ability to accurately sing or recognize a note without the aid of an instrument).

Halik then discovered a lasting love for music.

Talking to this reservoir of homespun opinions, knowledge, and observation, it is startling to reflect that this very present, persistent SOSU student saw the start of World War I, was alive when silent movies gave way to "talkies," watched the Great Depression ravage this nation, and has seen 18 presidents come and go in his lifetime before Bush's administration today.

These facts seem incongruous when one meets the man who today offers private violin lessons, animatedly attends and soaks up his classes, and proudly still drives himself around town in his own car.

To supplement the interview he granted, he provided a simple manila folder of his own treasured faded photos and reviews, which revealed a handsome young man who gracefully cradled his voice of expression, the violin. His collection of praise-filled reviews from old programs of his musical concerts are in themselves a nostalgic peek at simpler days.

Their quaintness doesn't disguise their impressive message, however—Mr. Halik has done his share of playing with some fine orchestras of his day.

Some of the teachers under whom he studied were well respected within the music world, Leopold Auer and Leon Sametini among them.

He is a graduate of the Wisconsin School of Music and the Chicago Musical College.

He did a year of graduate work at the Institute of Musical Art (affiliated with Juilliard), and at various times has taken directed studies under at least eighteen widely-known musician/instructors.

His musical career has taken him to Michigan, Wisconsin, California, and Chicago in Illinois, as a teacher, concert-master (filling the prestigious first chair of the violin section), and performer in various orchestras.

Now, Glen Halik has had to concede that the violin can wear heavy.

With his characteristically tenacious humor, he jokes about arthritis, which forced him to cut down on his prolific violin-playing. "I'm an arthritic violinist," he smiles, "I play around all the joints."

His arthritis has left him unable even to make a fist, and to play his violin he must rest it on a nearby piano.

Halik's eyes are weakening, and he wears hearing aids in both ears. "I like to tell people I have 'AIDS,'" he grinned, "and watch them react."

Halik also says his absolute pitch has "dropped a whole step" due to the wear of his years.

His thirst to stay on the go makes him impatient with the forced slow-down of old age.

"This getting old . . ." he observed. "Browning said the last of life is the best. Some of us just don't agree."

Halik, as well as others in their later years, are wasted in forced retirement, he says.

"I have much to offer in the field of teaching. I love to teach; I wish I had more students."

Halik Age 5 years

Education has been almost a hobby for Glen Halik. "I've taken classes and audited all my life. While teaching, I took classes. It's fun!

"I'm still weak in the area of theory. I could take classes for the rest of my life in that area," he said.

Halik moved here from Las Vegas, Nevada at the same time as his adopted daughter and her husband, who live a mile west of Albany.

They moved to Oklahoma to purchase land for their rabbit business because, as Halik explains, "There's no market for rabbits in Nevada."

He was widowed in 1982. According to Halik, who still keenly feels his wife's death, she died from high blood pressure and multiple strokes.

His sense of humor intact despite his loss, Halik jokes, "We met in a harmony class; we always said we were resolving discord ever since!"

Glen Halik's opinion of contemporary music is low. "Today's music has broken away from form. People who are only interested in the emotions of music don't always appreciate the other side.

"Those who've had training can appreciate it more.

"I'm in favor of experimentation, but music should be a thing of beauty. The repetition in rock and jazz seems primitive or savage to me. I like more variety."

However, Halik enjoys modern compositions written by Dr. Wintle, whose theory class Halik audits. "His music is interesting," observed Halik. "Much of modern music is dissonant, which I don't like.

"In Wintle's compositions, there is variety within each piece. He's a tremendous pianist.

Glen Halik 19 years old

Students react to news of

by Colleen McGraw
editor "The Southeastern"

When the first reports of anti-aircraft tracer fire in Baghdad entered the living rooms of Americans watching the Jan. 16 evening news reports, SOSU students experienced reactions that ranged from shock to jubilation to anger.

Within an hour after the president's official announcement of Operation Desert Storm, groups of students gathered in the Coffee Shop to watch the big screen television for the steady stream of updated information. Some were quiet and expressionless, watching the screen from a distance; others gathered at tables near the screen, ate, and loudly commented on the reports of Baghdad's bombing with a mood almost of celebration.

One group of debate team students working late in the Fine Arts Building compiled stacks of research material in front of a television while quietly discussing the possibility of a draft.

A student working a shift at KHIB student radio station took down news updates telephoned from Station Director Keith Varner to broadcast over the air.

In those first few hours after the bombing, the news was welcomed by some students.

"About time," said Troy Barnett, who sat watching television in SOSU's Baptist Student Union.

"We made a good choice in waiting until early morning their time," he observed.

"As for a draft, this is not supposed to be like another Vietnam, so there probably won't be a draft, but if they do, I'll go."

Edith Canaday, who sat in the Wesley Center watching news updates while her two daughters played nearby, was worried but said she was behind the president's choice.

"I support the president in what he's done, and I support Operation Desert Storm. I'm sorry it had to happen, but I still support him.

"I hope that our people will soon be home, though," said Canaday, who has a brother on active duty in Saudi Arabia.

Millie Allen, one of the debaters working late in the Fine Arts Building when the news hit, said she was worried about her family, especially her mother, whose work is directly related to Operation Desert Storm.

"I'm worried about my friends," she said, "the people I know who are already over there."

Steve Johnson expects to be called up for active duty by the end of the month, and says he is worried.

With his seat pulled up directly in front of the Coffee Shop television, Johnson talked with his somewhat more boisterous friends, but kept an attentive eye on the reports.

"We're probably going to lose a lot of people," he said.

"The people around us are taking this too lightly. Their attitude is too happy about what's happening, a 'gather 'round the flag' kind of thing," Johnson said.

"This will probably last a lot longer than most people think, maybe even a year," he predicted.

Other students expressed ambivalence about the purpose of the war.

"It sucks," Shannon McCraw said bluntly. "The whole thing does. There's going to be a chain reaction.

"However, it's not going to be another Vietnam," he amended. "I think it will probably be over soon.

"Anyway, now is not the time to protest. Now that they're in there, let's just get them in and get them out."

Bradley Biebuyck, who was entering the Coffee Shop where people clustered to watch the reports of early bombings, kept his comment simple: "I'm getting my bell bottoms out and I'm going to wear them. And my candle is lit."

Old Glory flies on SOSU campus.

Operation Desert Storm

The continuous news coverage persisted through Thursday, and the early reports told of initial U.S. victory above expectations.

Despite the good news, many classes appeared thinner than usual.

Professors in political science classes supplemented their course material with discussion of Operation Desert Storm.

Other instructors dismissed classes altogether because of the crisis.

However, the director of the campus Wesley Center, Alex Costea, said he had a different impression of the campus atmosphere.

He said he noticed a mood of, "I'm in Southeastern Oklahoma, so what? It's just another day."

"I don't think many students realize the full implications of what's going on," said Costea.

He added that those students who have been activated in the military will face tough times becoming readjusted to life in the states.

"Just think of how it is when you've been gone for a weekend. You come home and the house just doesn't fit right! Think how much worse it's going to be for these soldiers.

"There's going to be that kind of personal upheaval," he said.

As a Vietnam veteran, Costea feels he may be more keenly aware of war than many students, but added, "You'd think with people knowing this many people who are over there, there'd be more concern."

The campus displayed symbols of politics and emotion that took several forms.

The Morrison Building front lawn trees were liberally decorated with yellow ribbons to show concern for Operation Desert Storm soldiers.

Yellow ribbons also showed up on classroom doors, jacket lapels and car antennas.

One student combined the yellow ribbon with an American flag on his car antenna.

"Kick His—, George!," someone shoe polished onto the back window of a black sports car.

"Peace, please," urged a canvas banner draped over the Wesley Center's permanent sign.

And in contrast with nearby windows sporting Greek slogans, a derogative "No Camel Jockeys" slogan, accompanied by a slashed-through camel, adorned a window in Choctaw Tower facing out over the tennis court.

The Persian Gulf War continues with new complications: threatened linkage with the Arab-Israel issue began with Iraqi bombings of Tel Aviv and Haifa in Israel, and Israel is discussing plans to retaliate, which could tangle the loyalties of the Arabic coalition members.

President Bush is calling up as many as 200,000 new reserve troops, which could mean that he thinks the U.S. will need to settle in for the duration.

Support for the military action overall has stayed high in the U.S. this week, while a smaller sector continues to attract attention through public demonstrations.

One large poorly-timed protest was set up in front of the White House while the president whisked off to the Camp David retreat for the weekend.

Southeastern has quieted down somewhat after a week.

Students are realizing that Operation Desert Storm, right or wrong, may take quite a while.

This banner urges "Peace Please." It is draped over The Wesley Center's permanent sign.

Dr. Larry Williams began his tenure at Southeastern Oklahoma State University in May of 1987 as Interim President and was appointed by the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges as the university's fifteenth President on August 15, 1987. His inauguration, the first in Southeastern's history, took place on November 15, 1987. Dr. Williams, a respected leader in Oklahoma's education community, has spent over twenty-two years in higher education administration.

A native of Cushing, Oklahoma, Dr. Williams' academic credentials include a B.S. in Management, an M.B.A. and a Ph.D. Since 1967, when he began his administrative career in the Accounting Department of the Comptroller's Office at Oklahoma State University, he has held a variety of positions in Oklahoma's higher education system.

Dr. Williams is active in a variety of professional organizations and associations. As a consultant to hospitals, municipalities, and business organizations in Oklahoma and surrounding states, he has conducted marketing studies, promotional programs, image campaigns, and management analyses.

Under the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education, Dr. Williams chairs the Educational Outreach Committee. In addition to these responsibilities, he serves the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education as a member of the Council of Presidents, the Quality Initiative Committee, and the Capital Committee. For the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges, he served in 1989-90 as chair of the Presidents' Council representing Oklahoma's six regional universities and continues as a member of this council. He also serves the American Association of State Colleges and Universities as a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Rural Development. Dr. Williams is also associated with the Oklahoma Center for the Advancement of Science and Technology as a member of the MOST Eminent Scholars Research Equipment Committee and the Long Range Planning TASK FORCE.

In addition to his continuing association with and participation in service organizations including the Rotary Club, Jaycees, and United Way, Dr. Williams is serving as President of the Durant Chamber of Commerce for 1990 and is on the Board of Directors for the Medical Center of Southeastern Oklahoma.

SOSU Coach Jack Hedden, who resigned at the start of this season after 10 years as head man of the Savages, was honored Saturday night at Jack Hedden Appreciation Night before a crowd of onlookers in Bloomer Sullivan Gymnasium.

Hedden is the second winningest basketball coach in Southeastern history, trailing only legendary Hall of Fame Coach Bloomer Sullivan.

His teams won three Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference championships, reached the District 9 finals four times, won the District crown twice and twice went to the National Tournament in Kansas City.

The 1985-86 Savages finished third in the nation.

Coach Hedden produced four All-America performers, including three-time All-America Dennis (Worm) Rodman, who is now a professional standout with the Detroit Pistons.

Several of Hedden's former players were there Saturday for the game and the ceremony in which Coach Hedden received a plaque and other awards.

SOSU Teacher with Army honors dies at 57

by Colleen McGraw

Editor

Col. Gary C. Williams, 57, who joined the faculty at SOSU after 30 years of military service, died Dec. 24 at his home in Falconhead, near Marietta.

At the time of his death he was teaching Business Finance and Marketing courses.

Williams is survived by his wife Patsy Kuykendall Williams, who told The Southeastern he "loved this place."

"He felt the atmosphere was unmatched at any other place he'd seen. He really felt this campus was warm and loving and the faculty was outstanding here. He fit right in," she said.

"He was a Christian man; he lived the way he believed. We're really going to miss him."

After a service Dec. 26 in the First Christian Church of Marietta, where Col. Williams resided, he was buried in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Col. Williams was a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. and saw combat in the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam War.

As an Infantry officer he held multiple assignments in Vietnam as a Battalion and Regimental Advisor, Separate Brigade Intelligence Office, and commander of a U.S. Mechanized Infantry Battalion.

Following his last tour of duty in Vietnam he became Deputy Commander of the Third Infantry, known as the Old Guard, the Army Ceremonial and Honor Guard Unit in Washington, D.C.

He was the Army's Chief of Protocol during the nation's Bicentennial planning and celebration activities.

Col. Williams served as Command Center Operations Chief in the National Military Command Center, and as Commandant of the Army School of the Americas in Panama.

Four years prior to his retirement he worked for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, where he was responsible for monitoring the Western Hemisphere including Central and South America.

He also was Crisis Action Team Chief responsible for planning and monitoring the Grenada Rescue Operation and the Libyan Bombing Operation.

Col. Williams held numerous military qualifications including Airborne, Jumpmaster, Ranger, Pathfinder and Aerial Refueling server.

He was a graduate of the Command and General Staff School, the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, National Security Management Course, the Naval War College and the Army War College.

Among his many decorations were the Defense Superior Service Medal, two awards of the Legion of Merit, three Bronze Stars, the Purple Heart, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, three Army Meritorious Service Medals, 11 Air Medals, Combat Infantryman, Joint Service Staff and Army Staff Badges, and numerous foreign decorations including the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and the Medal of Honor, First Class.

He was married on Feb. 14, 1989, in Marietta to Patsy Kuykendall.

Also surviving are sons Gary C. Williams, Jr. of Falls Church Va., and John Williams of Radford Va.; stepsons Keith Kuykendall, Georgetown, Texas; Brent Kuykendall of Helsingborg, Sweden; and Karl Kuykendall, Lewisville, Texas; five step-grandchildren.

He was an active member of Marietta's First Christian Church.

Williams welcomed newly commissioned officers into the army on Dec. 18.

"He was a military man through and through, and was very proud of his uniform," according to Col. G. Williams' surviving wife Patsy Kuykendall Williams.

Dr. Lee Ball,
dedicated instructor
retires Spring '91

Dr. Lee Ball, an instructor in the English Department since 1960, retires at the end of the Spring 1991 semester.

He was born on June 15, 1926, in New York City, and later attended Syracuse University where he received an AB in 1947, and an AM in 1948, and he received a PhD from the University of Wisconsin in 1958.

He and his wife Kate Hart Ball have two children a son, John Roger, and a daughter Elizabeth.

Since he plans to write another poem in Spenserian stanzas, take a course in Botany, and master the computer, Dr. Ball will stay busy even after his retirement.

Closing

When we began research on our theme this year the Persian Gulf Crisis had just begun. Our hopes were that we could close our year's work with pictures and words of diplomatic compromises and our troops homecoming. As those hopes have not been realized, we must alter our viewpoint somewhat. The goal of this year's yearbook is to highlight the spirit of unity throughout Southeastern's campus. We included as many pictures of different events as was possible. Unfortunately, we were not always able to identify everyone in each picture. We apologize in advance for any omissions, misspellings, or other errors which may have gone to press despite numerous editing sessions.

The road to retirement and leisure is a long, long one. The maintenance department is one of the most needed departments on campus. Without these people our campus would not function. So, this year we would like to honor one of these individuals who make our campus more comfortable and more productive.

Coy Williamson has been with SOSU since 1975. He has for the last several years taken care of the air conditioning and heating systems in the Towers. He has insured many peaceful nights sleep for hundreds of students. To Mr. Williamson, thank you for your devotion to us and enjoy your retirement.
